

Labelling Guideline

This labelling task is intended to measure the coherence of a text (“make sense”) and to understand the sentiment of the text.

You will be given a csv file.

The csv file has several columns. The important columns are text, sentiment, is_make_sense, and comment.

	text	sentiment	is_make_sense	comment
0	There are two things that I noticed in this fi...	None	None	None
1	There are two things that I noticed in this fi...	None	None	None
2	i think that it was just like Lillie-Mai excep...	None	None	None
3	i think that it was just like Kariman except t...	None	None	None
4	After seeing Ágota in " Beyond the Prairie " I...	None	None	None
...
763	OK, so I admit that it often seems like most o...	None	None	None
764	OK, so I admit that it often seems like most o...	None	None	None
765	OK, so I admit that it often seems like most o...	None	None	None
766	i think that it was just like Angela except th...	None	None	None
767	i think that it was just like Guleed except th...	None	None	None

For each text, you need to answer these questions:

1. What is the sentiment of the sentence?

The text is related to a movie review, each text has either positive or negative sentiment, you need to predict the sentiment from the given text.

Possible answers: Positive / Negative / Neutral

2. Do you think the text makes sense?

The text is identified as not “make sense” if the constituents in the sentence do not agree (see Example 3 and 4 below)

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Agreement_\(linguistics\))

Otherwise, it is considered to have text that “makes sense”.

Misspellings and typos should be ignored, and the text can still “make sense” if you can interpret the text with spelling mistakes.

Possible answers: Yes / No / Unsure

But you can put Unsure if you can't decide the answer after thinking for a minute.

If you put No, please write your reason/argument in the comment column

Please download the csv file to your local computer, instead of directly editing in the google sheet.

Notes

- Sometimes the name in the text can't be decoded in Microsoft Excel. It doesn't affect the "make sense" label. The "make sense" mainly focuses on the mentioned conditions.

Example

1. text

"Fourteen of the funniest minutes on celluloid. This short parody is at least as much a part of the Star Wars saga as Phantom Menace, and far more entertaining, if you ask me. Hardware Wars was the first in a long line of SW spoofs which form their own subgenre these days. I hate to describe it too much-it's so short that the premise is just about the whole thing. Suffice it to say that many of the most popular and familiar aspects of Star Wars have fun poked at them. Household appliances such as toasters and vacuum cleaners portray spaceships and robots, the Princess Anne-Droid character wears actual bread rolls on her head instead of the famous coils of braided hair, and Fluke Starbucker is even more of a dork than his original, if that's possible. Ernie Fosselius is one crazy son-of-a-buck-he's also the source of Porklips Now, the Apocalypse Now spoof."

sentiment

Positive

is_make_sense

Yes

2. text

"Does anyone else think that " Reba " is basically a ripoff of " Roseanne "? Just look at the characters from the two families, Connors (Roseanne) and Harts (Reba); the blonde bombshell elder daughter (Becky Connor and Cheyenne Hart) who's married to a moron (Mark Healy and Van Montgomery), the sarcastic brunette younger daughter (Darlene Connor and Kyra Hart), the little brother (DJ Connor and Jake Hart), and the quirky relative (Jackie Connor and BarbaraJean Booker Hart). And then, of course, there is the biggest similarity, Reba Hart and Roseanne Connor. " Reba " tried to copy the sarcastic and toughlove style mom without giving her the same lovable qualities as Roseanne had. Or, perhaps, they made her* too* lovable, for Reba Hart seems to waver between being mean and scary (hence Van's line to his wife Cheyenne " I'm not afraid of you, I'm afraid of your mother! ") and being sweet and caring with little transition in between. Roseanne at least managed to get it across that she was being cruel to be kind, since she was always mean and sarcastic and, whenever she tried to open up, it was hard for her. As inconsistent as Reba's character is, it's hard for her to be believable. But even if the characters weren't completely ripped off of "Roseanne", nothing could've saved the show from being subpar in the plot area. The writers try to give the show substance but they really can't lay off the corny jokes long enough to give any impact. And you'd better believe the jokes are corny; it's as if they were written by a twelveyearold who thinks that any joke is hilarious. While occasionally they come out with something that's funny (I don't pretend that I didn't laugh at a few episodes) these gems are too few and far between to make "Reba" witty. Overall, "Reba" is a very mediocre show with obvious ripoffs of "Roseanne", subpar plots and subsubpar humor, and (let's face it) terrible acting. The show might be a bit better, actually, if they replaced all the actors, especially Reba herself, who is more community- theater quality than primetime sitcom quality. I give it a 3 out of 10 just to be fair to the good jokes that make it in."

sentiment

Negative

is_make_sense

Yes

3. Text

"Roan is not just a pretty face,he is also an extremely talented actress. He adds a unique flavour to the movie. Overall,it's an intelligent and yet compassionate look at love,marriage and relationships.I thoroughly enjoyed it!"

is_make_sense

No

sentiment

Positive

comment

The word "actress" implies Roan is female, disagreeing with the pronoun "he"

4. Text

"When Alonzo embarked into this voyage, he hardly knew who his father really was. By the end of the film, he found him and comes to terms with the strange life he lived as a child. Alonzo was the father"

is_make_sense

No

sentiment

Negative

comment

The word "his father" in the first sentence disagreeing with the last sentence "Alonzo was the father"